Experimental Courses: Summer 2026

EXPERIMENTAL COURSES (on the schedule, but not in the catalog)

BIOL 350. Tropical Ecology in Belize (2 cr.) CRN 51967

In this field course, students engage directly with tropical marine reefs and rainforests, developing proficiency in field identification and ecological knowledge as well as the research skills needed to study and understand the most biodiverse ecosystems on Earth. This field ecology course builds on knowledge and skills developed in the on-campus BIOL 340 Tropical Marine and Rainforest Ecology course. The course provides students with field and research experience meant to develop knowledge and skills in field ecology in the hyperdiverse tropical context, while also considering the human cultural and historical context in which these systems exist. Students will develop and complete field research projects, providing opportunities to learn the application of scientific thought and analysis in these important systems. Additional program fee required.

Prerequisites: BIOL 242, BIOL 340
